Wood in its most attractive form.

Wood being a natural material is an intrinsic aspect of its appeal. In times of growing environmental awareness, its natural esthetic makes wood an increasingly popular material choice for interior design. Modern wood processing techniques now allow for the manufacture of new and innovative kinds of veneers that opened up entirely new design possibilities.

Where our existing collection of standard veneers covered 111 of the most common species of wood, this new collection goes beyond the plain veneer. With its focus on the unconventional, it embraces what would otherwise be considered flaws, such as cracks, saw-rough finishes or even discoloration caused by burrowing beetles. End grain veneers as well as veneers made from reclaimed wood also find representation.

This collection contains textures for 36 different veneers of various species, styles and treatments - 112 variations in total.

Our tried and tested scanning process captures every aspect that gives wood its characteristic appearance. Accurate normal, bump & specular maps are essential to be able to achieve photo-real and authentic render results.
